

West Briton

Thursday 8th April 2010

All eyes on The Cornwall this summer

Take your time

NEXT time you visit St Austell, don't forget to check out The Cornwall - a new hotel, spa and restaurant - which local people can enjoy just as much as holiday-makers.

The Arboretum offers fine dining and a new addition to Cornwall's reputation as a foodie paradise. The informal Acorns brasserie is more family-oriented. And why not book a treatment at The Clearing Spa if you really want to feel those stresses and strains slipping away. Fine food with a local flavour.

Head chef at The Cornwall is local boy Tom Bradbury, who has returned to his St Austell roots after several years working at some of London's finest restaurants.

"For me, it's all about the ingredients, and letting the cooking do justice to the finest produce," says Tom. "And sourcing fantastic ingredients in Cornwall is easy. We're spoilt for choice."

Take your time at The Clearing Spa

For local people, The Clearing Spa is another good reason to check out Cornwall's most prestigious new hotel.

Leisure manager Gemma Staveley says that an increasing number of local people are enjoying this luxury spa - which includes infinity-edge swimming pool, gymnasium, sauna, steam and treatment rooms.

"Becoming a member here will give you access to some of the best spa facilities in the country. But we're also encouraging local people to just book in for a treatment so that they can try out The Clearing Spa for themselves."

The best of Cornwall

Food is not the only feature that celebrates the best of the west. The hotel is privileged to have the opportunity to display five original portraits by the renowned artist Robert Lenkiewicz who produced many works of national importance from his Plymouth studio. "Thanks to the generosity of a local collector, our Drawing Room is like a boutique art gallery," comments general manager James Harding.

"These five Lenkiewicz oil paintings really are quite stunning. And, of course, you won't find a 'gallery' anywhere with quite such a fantastic choice of fine food and drinks!"

Find out more about The Cornwall Hotel, Spa and Estate at www.thecornwall.com

You do not have to be a member to come and enjoy a treatment at The Clearing Spa.

Fine dining at The Arboretum restaurant - a great reason to visit St Austell. Non-residents are welcome.

With summer on the way, the Parkland Terrace at The Cornwall Hotel will be one of the hottest spots to enjoy an alfresco meal or drink.